Happy Thanksgiving!

Find the joy!

As the leaves turn and Thanksgiving draws near, this season invites us to pause and reflect, not only on the challenges we face, but also on the countless moments of joy and success that fill our classrooms each day.

A special reminder that Veterans Day is November 11th. If your school is planning a Veterans Day program, consider inviting veterans who are family members of the students you see every day. Creating those meaningful connections between our classrooms and the community is a powerful way to honor service while helping students celebrate their own family stories and experiences.

As educators, you are the heartbeat of your school. Your patience, creativity, compassion, and resilience shape lives in ways that often go unseen but are never unfelt. The impact you make extends far beyond lesson plans and report cards, reaching into the futures of the children entrusted to your care. As we move through the coming weeks, I encourage you to intentionally find one thing each day that brings you joy or reminds you why you chose this calling. Maybe it's a student's smile, a breakthrough moment, an unexpected laugh, a kind note, or a quiet word of thanks. These small moments are gifts that sustain us and remind us of the incredible work we do.

This November, may your heart be filled with gratitude, your spirit refreshed by the blessings around you, and your days brightened by the joy that lives within your classroom. The difference you make matters, and you are appreciated more than you know. 🍂❤️
